

RoidsCo Announces New Prohormones Blog

August 01, 2016

August 01, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Ashtabula, Ohio based company, RoidsCo, has announced a new blog for those interested in learning more about prohormones. The company states that they are now publishing information related to this biochemical that is often used by athletes and bodybuilders, to offer various insights into what it is and how it can affect people.

William Johnson, founder of RoidsCo, says, "There just isn't a lot of unbiased information on the internet about prohormones. We've decided to launch this site in an attempt to help consumers better understand the ups and downs of this supplement, and to give them general information."

The site can be seen at <https://roids.co> and has a number of posts filled with information to help consumers better understand this product and what it does. Posts include those related to supplements and body building, as well as general health information.

Johnson states that the blog will cover all essential supplements for those who are body building or anyone who wants to learn more about general fitness. Topics currently available include proteins and muscle building, as well as hormones, prohormones, and steroids.

Johnson says, "We just want everyone to be informed, and to be healthy while they are building muscle and striving to get the bodies that they want. We would love to invite everyone to also like our Facebook page, where we will share even more information and keep you updated about any new posts going on to the site." The Facebook page will also enable consumers to connect with the company on a more personal levels, and to interact and share personal experiences with others who share their same interests of body building and fat burning.

He says that the site will be updated regularly as new information is found, and as writers feel that consumers need to read about important updates or general fitness strategies. RoidsCo provides a wealth of information to those looking to live a healthier lifestyle, such as body builders who may want to learn more about steroid use and general supplements and how they can affect weight training and overall health.

Johnson also urges those interested in body building to follow the company on their Google+ Page, which will also provide updates to future information.
