August 03, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

National Trash Valet in Surprise, Arizona, has announced a means of boosting apartment complex revenue. The company provides information for apartment complexes and others who want to offer valet trash services, and provides a course to help those interested in starting this type of business.

RJ Watters with National Trash Valet says, "Adding a valet trash service amenity to apartment complexes brings in additional income for apartment owners and investors. They can then keep the added revenue or use the money to offset any repairs or improvements that need to be done."

Watters states that the said service can be very efficient and profitable for apartments and other facilities, or those who simply want to begin a service in their community. The company provides information primarily for multi-family properties such as condominiums, student housing, senior living complexes, and apartment communities.

"Valet trash services is a no-risk revenue source," says Watters. "Every resident in your complex is going to appreciate the fact that you are providing this service, and it's an easy service to provide."

Watters states that the service offers doorstep waste collection five nights each week. Residents simply put tied up trash bags in provided containers at a designated time of the day and valets collect the waste and take it to the dump. Empty trash containers are brought back to residents for future collections. Watters states that going green is an option that many communities are implementing, and one that residents will certainly appreciate.

National Trash Valet offers an online training system that includes 30 training videos as well as customizable downloadable resources that include violation reports, contracts, and pricing sheets. Also included are cold calling scripts and contact information for the top 50 apartment management companies and the top 50 apartment managers to give those creating this service an easy start. Information on where to find supplies and equipment is also included in the course.
