Inventor starts Athletes Performance Gear, Inc. to get his new product designed for fitness walkers to market. He states that HYDRO by APG hydration system is specifically designed to make it easier and simpler to stay hydrated while walking and running.

A spokesperson for the company says, "The simpler and easier it is to access your water while exercising, the more likely you are to drink like you should when walking. And, by staying properly hydrated, the more walking you can do."

The company states that the design of the bottle, which can be seen at <http://apgrocks.com/product/hydro-pink-kit/>, makes it more comfortable to carry water when walking and unlike weights the bottles get lighter as you drink so never becoming a burden to use. They are designed for comfort, requiring virtually no effort to hold, and contain a trigger that opens a valve allowing control of how much and how quickly hydration fluid should flow.

Carrying a single water bottle has been shown to negatively affect gait and posture, which can lead to negative effects on the body. Most people who want to see the adverse effects of carrying a single water bottle or phone can watch any walker or runner from behind that is carrying something in one hand. APG's water bottles are designed to use in pairs, which encourages proper posture and form.

Even the First Lady, Michelle Obama, who can be seen at <http://apgrocks.com/michelle-obama-gets-it/>, has learned the benefits of walking while bringing hydration fluid with her. Other workout enthusiasts have discovered this as well. Not only do they have the means to stay hydrated they can now do so with water bottles that work with the bodies natural rhythmic movement helping to develop a better physique.

"They give you hours of hydration," says the company spokesperson. "Each bottle holds 15 ounces, so when you're carrying two, you've got enough fluids to stay hydrated throughout your workout routine."

Free weight attachments, which come with the purchase of the new bottles, can also be added to the bottles for enhanced strength building and promotion of muscle building in the arms and shoulders while burning fat. The company states that they will be adding even more optional attachments in the future which include a Bluetooth speaker, stun gun, and flashlight that will offer additional safety for walkers.

Those interested in learning more about the new bottles can see them on the company's official website at <http://apgrocks.com/>.
