NC Garage Door Repair, a business in Charlotte, NC, has announced that they are expanding their geographical reach. Aside from Charlotte, they will now also offer their garage door repair services in Belmont, Cornelius, Dallas, Davidson, Denver, Harrisburg, Huntersville, Fort Mill, Kannapolis, Lowell, Maiden, Mathews, Mooresville, Mount Holly, Mount Pleasant, Newport, and Pineville. More details about their services can be obtained at <http://ncgaragedoorrepair.com>.

Tim Parker, President of NC Garage Door Repair, says: "We are very excited about how our new customers have responded in all the new cities we now offer garage door repair and installation services."

NC Garage Door Repair, as the name suggests, started operating by just providing services for the repair of garage doors. However, it wasn't long before they started to increase the number of services that they offer, focusing on other issues such as the installation of the garage door, as well as the garage door opener. The company has existed for many years now, and they have grown an impressive customer base and an excellent local reputation.

Through sustained growth, the company has been able to expand their fleet of vehicles, as well as their members of staff. It is through this growth that they now able offer their services in many other parts of North Carolina as well. They look forward to becoming a household name in those different areas and are already making great strides towards achieving that.

One of their latest areas of service is installing garage door openers. Many people in the North Carolina area still have manual garage doors. The doors themselves, as well as their mechanisms, are often still in perfect working order. However, having to manually open them can be labor intensive, particularly for people with mobility issues, such as the elderly. What NC Garage Door Repair is able to do is upgrade these manual doors into those that can be opened using an electric motor. This is a much more affordable solution than having to completely remove and replace a door.

In all its endeavors, NC Garage Door Repair is committed to quality, professionalism, and excellent customer service. They encourage anyone with a garage door requirement, whether it is for repair, upgrade, or installation, to contact them as soon as possible.
