

Commercial Construction Contractor In Canada Expands Services

August 22, 2016

August 22, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Montana Construction, a construction and renovation company in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, has moved to a new office in 2015. Since then, they have been able to add two new services for Canadian commercial industrial, oilfield, and agriculture business clients. These services are non-emergency and emergency building repair services, and steel building construction. Being known as a provider of high quality construction and renovation service Canada businesses can depend on, this expansion of services has come as welcome news.

Jack Wur from Montana Construction says: "Montana Construction has experienced great growth over the past few years, which required a move into a larger location in Saskatoon. Now, not only does Montana Construction specialize in tenant improvements in the retail sector all across Canada, but are now able to offer two new contracting services for clients. Montana Construction's network of Canadian contractors are fully set up to offer emergency and non-emergency building maintenance repairs for businesses all across Canada. Additionally, the second new contracting service offered is complete steel building construction for commercial, industrial, oilfield and agriculture business clients, specifically for the provinces of Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta."

The Canada wide service for non-emergency building maintenance and emergency building repairs, includes everything from minor plumbing and electrical repairs to major repairs. These include such things as repairs to damages to building storefront. The second new service focuses on steel building construction specifically for industrial, commercial, agricultural and oilfield industries in three Canadian provinces.

As a steel building construction contractor, Montana Construction has been at the forefront of many important industrial and agricultural developments in particular. Their gallery of images gives a good overview of the work that they have already provided. These images clearly demonstrate how the company focuses not only on practicalities in their design, but on beauty as well. Their work are modern, sleek, and befitting of 21st century needs.

The construction company continues to experience significant growth, and their two new services are already proving to be very popular. Montana Construction looks forward to having greater involvement in various services across the region and in Canada as a whole. They encourage businesses with construction requirements to contact them for further information.
