Charlette's Web Pest Control, a termite control business in Spring, TX, has released new information about the importance of termite inspections before selling a home. As the housing market in the Spring area is improving, many people require inspection services but often only request them after they have sold their property. According to Charlotte's Web Pest Control, a better option is to have the inspection completed before putting the property on the market.

Charlette, founder and owner for Charlette's Web Pest Control, says: "Many people sell their home, have the inspection done, and find they have some sort of infestation. This can seriously jeopardize the overall selling process, with many buyers cancelling, and others requiring expensive exterminations to prove termites and other pests have been eradicated. By using our service before selling a property, all of this can be avoided."

Known as one of the best termite control Spring, Texas companies, Charlette's Web Pest Control can complete a full inspection of a home, focusing on all forms of pests. They particularly emphasize the importance of completing a termite inspection, as these pests can be particularly devastating to the overall value of a property.

"Usually, when people want to sell their home, they do all they can to make it look as good as possible," adds Charlette. "They clean the property, repaint the walls, and fix minor defects. But for some reason, many forget to do a pest inspection, which is a real shame. We encourage everyone who is considering the possibility of selling a home to contact us for a full inspection, so that they don't end up with nasty and expensive surprises further down the road."

Because termites are so common in Texas, regulations have been put in place to ensure pest control companies like Charlette's Web perform their jobs properly, with long lasting results. As such, they always check the latest wood destroying insect reports to ensure they know which pests are prevalent, and provide termite treatments with warranty renewals. This means that homeowners can protect their investment, after a treatment is done, as long as they live at the home year after year with a warranty renewal.
