Charlette's Web Pest Control has announced a new type of service for customers in Tomball, Spring, and The Woodlands, Texas. The pest control company recently stated that they are now offering bed bug control services in addition to the other services. The company has noted that a study performed by Bugs Without Borders in 2015 states that bed bugs are the most difficult pests to control.

A spokesperson for Charlette's Web Pest Control agrees. She says, "They're more difficult to contain and exterminate than ants or even roaches. Unfortunately, many consumers don't realize this and they spend sometimes thousands of dollars on DIY treatments that ultimately fail."

The company states that depending on the scope of the infestation, it could take several treatments to completely control it. Recent news stories show that the bed bug population has grown to alarming heights all over the world. Their resurgence over the past 50 years has many consumers concerned.

"It's good to be concerned," says Charlette. "People need to learn ways of preventing the spread of bed bugs and they need to know how to handle them if and when they do bring them home."

The company states that professional pest control services are nearly always needed to effectively rid the home of these unwanted pests. Charlette states that a focus on prevention can go a long way in helping to rid the world of these pests. She says that even if they are not gone forever, if consumers learn how to effectively prevent their spread, they can help to minimize the population.

"It's all about education," says the company spokesperson. Charlette's Web Pest Control offers bed bug removal services and they state that they will educate their customers as much as possible about the bugs, their habits and hiding places, and how to best prevent spreading them. The company states that while the bugs can be difficult to eradicate, they can be effectively removed and often the first step in ridding a home of them is education.

More about the methods that the company uses for bed bug control and their other pest control services can be seen on their official website.
