"We are vigilant in our search and review emerging technologies that will provide our customers with the most current systems available while at the same time utilizing only time proven and tested roof systems to your project," says President Brian Galvin.

Exterior remodeling and renovations can save you time and money in the long-term, including energy savings that most outdoor home improvements deliver. Exterior renovations can also save you money by protecting your home from interior moisture damage and pest infestations.

On projects like siding replacement, hidden structural problems can be exposed and remediated before their cost multiplies. Exterior remodeling also greatly increases the resale value of your home.

In addition to the added energy savings many exterior improvements provide, newer fixtures can provide better insulation to your home and reduce the seepage of cold or hot air, making the temperature in your living areas much more comfortable and easier to control.

"Our commitment to our customers is that we will be at the forefront of home repair and offer systems that are energy efficient and friendly to the environment," says Brian.

Brian Galvin founded Galvin HR in 2003 and heads their business development, sales, and quality control divisions. Brian is involved in every project from the first call until completion and inspection.

"Using my background in roofing system design and home building, I combine my eye for design with my mind for construction. I recognize that the roofing industry lacks certain regulations and controlled standards, leaving a tainted reputations in the minds of consumers. At Galvin Home Renovations, we bring an entirely new level of knowledge and expertise to each job site," says Brian.
