September 06, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Appalachian Machine, based in Dublin, Virginia, has announced that they have surpassed their 30 year mark in business. The company provides trash carts, commercial garbage trucks, and cart lifters for area and nationwide customers.

Warren Mills with Appalachian Machine says, "We are proud of our reputation in the waste management industry. We've been here for more than 30 years and pride ourselves on the high quality products and level of customer service that we offer our customers."

More about the specific products and services that the company offers can be seen on their official website at <https://www.appalachianmachine.com/>. Mills says that along with manufacturing engineering solutions, the company offers welding, fabrication, and CNC or manual machining.

"We strive to cover all the bases, giving our customers exactly what they need and precisely when they need it," Mills states. "We believe that it's this dedication to customer service that has kept us in business since 1985."

Appalachian Machine offers standardized and easily customizable lift units. Mills states that nearly all of the units that they build are custom made for customers, and that only the best quality of materials are used to ensure a quality and safe product every time. The company provides lift units that can be built to dump containers in various shapes and sizes, and all components are designed for durability. Mills invites those interested to learn more about their customized products at <https://www.appalachianmachine.com/product-category/lift-units/>.

The company says that their overall commitment to safety is what has prompted customers to return to them over and over during the past 30 years. Mills states that the manufacturing team meets on a regular basis to discuss how the design of all of their products can be improved, ensuring that all are up to date with the latest technology and safety standards.

Appalachian Machine Inc. was founded in 1985 by a U.S. veteran. The company states that they have more than 100 years of combined experience, ensuring that their customers get the very best in products and services.
