Why Make A Will - Study Finds Two Thirds Of Adults In UK Have Not Made One

September 12, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

In a recent piece of research, it was found that two thirds of adults in the United Kingdom do not have a will. On top of that, the few who do have a will often haven't updated it, leaving them in danger of dying intestate. Will Writing Services Harrow, based in Harrow, Middlesex, wants to send out the message that do-it-yourself (DIY) will writing should not be risked, and they encourage people to contact them to get more information. The company points out that although DIY will writing packs can easily be purchased, it is still better to consult professional will writers and lawyers to ensure that all aspects have been taken into account.

Shane Watson from Will Writing Services Harrow says: "Too many people seem to think that writing a will is not important, or that it is just for the very rich. In reality, however, anyone with any kind of assets or debts should write a will in order to ensure that their surviving loved ones are properly looked after. We have helped numerous families and individuals protect what is precious to them, and we encourage everyone to contact us to do the same."

Besides making a will, Will Writing Services Harrow offers a number of other services. Primarily, they provide a home visit service, for those who are unable or are too busy with work to make time to travel to take care of something as important as this, but who still wish to protect their families. Furthermore, they offer a lasting power of attorney service. This service is vital for those who fear they may not, at some point, be able to manage their own affairs anymore, for instance, after an accident or degenerative disease. Finally, they offer an advance directive, or living will service, which enables people to legally determine the level of medical support they will receive in case of an accident or certain illnesses.

"A lot of people continue to wonder, why make a will at all," adds Shane Watson. "Without a will, however, all assets will simply be divided according to legislation, not taking into account what someone's wishes may be. This can also cause a great deal of stress with the surviving loved ones."
