Orlando, Florida based company Foxbrim has announced recently that their Peptide Complex Face Serum has now reached more than 2,500 reviews from the Amazon marketplace. The company states that many customers have sent in their before and after photos, and that a large majority of their reviews are positive.

Luann Koerper with Foxbrim says, "We're not at all surprised by the thousands of positive reviews. It's gentle enough for everyday use, and most customers tell us that they begin seeing significant results after just a month of use."

Foxbrim's Anti-Aging Peptide Complex Face Serum contains collagen-producing peptides that have been found to effectively trigger the healing and repair response in the epidermis. Combined with Hyaluronic Acid, Jojoba Oil and Vitamin E, which have been shown to help repair and moisturize, this advanced delivery system is designed to create supple and younger-looking skin.

The company states that the peptides are coupled with soothing and nurturing moisturizing agents to help the body produce more collagen, and to effectively stimulate collagen and elastin fibroblasts. "It also aids in increasing skin thickness and refines appearance of wrinkles, restoring elasticity and firmness," says Koerper. "Not only will this repair damaged skin, it also fortifies and improves skin texture and clarity with continued use."

The company states that none of their products are tested on animals, and they contain no synthetic additives, silicones, or parabens that can cause dryness, irritation, and skin damage. Koerper says that this is one reason why the peptide complex serum has received so many positive reviews on the Amazon marketplace. She states that the ingredients, such as vitamin E, jojoba oil, and hyaluronic acid, can help to protect and nourish the skin as opposed to other products that can dry out skin and cause long term damage.

The company states that customers have been raving about the silk amino acid blend, which is a natural water-soluble protein extracted from raw silk. Silk amino acids have high levels of serine, which has been found to help preserve moisture in skin and hair.

Those interested in learning more about the serum or in reading through some of the positive reviews left by customers can visit Foxbrim's Amazon.com storefront.
