Foxbrim's Organic Castor Oil has been featured on E! News Online article as the solution for repairing over-plucked eyebrows. Based in Orlando, Florida, Foxbrim is a company that provides a number of organic and natural ingredient based skin care products.

Luann Koerper with Foxbrim says, "We're thrilled, of course, that they chose to feature Foxbrim's 100% Pure Organic Castor Oil."

The E! News Online article talked about various solutions to repair eyebrows that have been over plucked and focused on the castor oil provided by Foxbrim, because it is completely natural and contains no artificial ingredients that could cause skin irritation. Koerper points out that all of the company's products are natural.

"We wouldn't offer our customers anything but the best, so all of our skin care products are organic, natural products that contain the very best minerals and ingredients for the healthiest results," Koerper says.

Foxbrim's castor oil featured on E! News Online is 100 percent pure and organic, according to Koerper. She states that it also contains no hexanes or contaminants that could cause skin allergies. The castor oil is cold pressed and unrefined, which are some of the characteristics that E! News Online found to be interesting about the organic oil.

Celebrity eyebrow artist Anthony Andrews was also featured in the post, where he outlines ways to regrow eyebrows that have been plucked too much. Andrews states that it takes time for the eyebrows to regrow and that using pure and natural castor oil, can help to speed up the healing process. He says that organic castor oil is best to avoid excessive irritation and to help promote new growth of eyebrows.

The feature article recommends seeking professional guidance if over plucking has occurred but then says that Foxbrim offers an organic castor oil which is a much better choice than oils that contain man made materials and ingredients.

The company states that they are honored to have been mentioned by Andrews and being featured in the post and they assure that customers will find their castor oil to be of the highest possible quality. Those interested can see Foxbrim's full line of 100% pure organic oils by visiting the company's official website.
