

Content Design and Development Agency Announced as Part of WBEC-West Host Committee

June 07, 2017

June 07, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

WBEC-WEST, an organization based in Mesa, Arizona, has announced the Women's Business Enterprise National Council (WBENC) National Conference & Business Fair Host Committee. Louise Parker, President of Blade Inc. in Phoenix, Arizona, has been listed as one of the newest committee members. The National Conference & Business Fair will take place this June 20-22 in Las Vegas, NV.

Founded in 2002, Blade Inc. is a design content agency specializing in video production and post-production as well as web and mobile application design and development. The company creates content, web and mobile apps for a number of clients and prides themselves on their team's aptitude.

"I am always so charged after WBENC's conferences, that I feel like I could conquer the world," says Louise Parker.

Parker states that she is honored to partner with the women of the Host Committee and says that all women in business should seriously consider WBENC-Certification. Her agency features a team of motion designers, copywriters, editors, animators, and project managers, among others, who follow client projects from start to finish. She states that small business owners, particularly those who oversee many different projects and employees, can gain massive knowledge and benefit from having WBENC-Certification.

"Just because you have a certification does not mean contracts will fall in your lap. You will get out of your certification what you put into it. Attend everything you can, network at the events, and don't discount the other WBEs - they may be your next client," states Parker when asked about what she would say to those wondering if they should get certified or those who are newly certified with WBENC.

Parker states that her story is not much different from other small business owners, particularly women, and that funding is and has always been an issue for small businesses. She states that many smaller independent banks are often more in favor or more focused on seeing the success of small businesses, which equates to them being more committed to stronger relationships with those smaller companies. She says that this type of knowledge is shared through members of the WBENC network and that she urges small business owners to seriously consider affiliating themselves with this organization.
