September 08, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

PlantsILY is a leader in teaching consumers how to grow their own medical marijuana quickly and discreetly. The Canadian government has announced revisions to the Conservative administrations prior system for medicinal marijuana.

This new legislation will allow patients who are prescribed medical marijuana to grow their own medical marijuana. The change permits patients who have been authorized to grow a limited amount of cannabis for their own personal needs. A judge claimed that the Conservative government's prior legislation was deemed unfair, and limited people from accessing their medical marijuana. PlantsILY has been a leader for people who have been growing their own medical marijuana, and provides resources for anyone who is looking to grow medical cannabis.

Dr. Lester Grinspoon, who is an associate professor emeritus of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School claims that "Cannabis is becoming increasingly understood. It is a very interesting and versatile medicine with much less toxicity than some of the pharmaceutical products it replaces." Medical cannabis is helping millions of people all over the world, and more doctors than ever before are aware of the benefits of marijuana. Medical marijuana one of the most effective alternative medications that can be prescribed to help people suffering from pain, anxiety, arthritis, glaucoma, and many more diseases.

If you have been approved to grow your own medical marijuana, PlantsILY provides methods, as well as tips and tricks on how to grow cannabis. This site is an industry leader in cannabis knowledge and products for consumers.
