Grace Foods USA has announced a new milestone for their recently launched coconut milk powder. The company, whose products are available on the Amazon marketplace, announced that their coconut milk powder has reached a milestone of 40 positive reviews.

"It's wonderful when we know that we've released a product that consumers want," says Deidre, a representative from Grace Foods USA. "Our customers are very appreciative of our dry coconut milk, and we've gotten so many wonderful reviews from it."

Deidre states that although the product has only been available on the Amazon marketplace for a short time, it has been selling very well. She says that overall the company was surprised at how quickly it caught on, and how quickly customers began providing positive reviews.

The coconut milk powder has reached more than 40 reviews and all of them have been at least a 4.5 on Amazon's review scale. The powdered milk contains no preservatives, a fact that is likely one of the main reasons that it is so well liked.

The company states that they have developed the coconut milk product to be used in soups, baked goods, smoothies, and other foods. Because it is in powder form and not in the traditional liquid form, it does not require refrigeration and has a much longer shelf life than liquid coconut milk. It's convenience and longevity is something customers have been raving about since the product was first released.

In addition to the ease of use because customers simply have to add warm water to get liquid coconut milk, the company is also providing a bonus recipe e-book that is delivered digitally to customers via email. Recipes include entrees as well as desserts and side dishes.

Grace Foods USA supplies a number of similar products to consumers, all of which are available through the Amazon marketplace. The reviews of the product, as well as specifics on this and other products from the company, can be seen on their Amazon seller's page.
