May 27, 2015 -

Veteran-owned Scottsdale custom home builders, Peak One Builders & Restoration, has recently announced the launching of its new website, designed to provide an improved user experience for visitors. Whether they're interested in building or remodeling a home or just want to get more detailed information about what's involved, guests of the website will be able to take advantage of the expertise of the company's team of professionals to give them the service they need.

Peak One Builders & Restoration has been working with home construction projects since its founding in 2002. Since then, it has been able to maintain a zero complaint record with both the Arizona Registrar of Contractors and the Better Business Bureau, and has received praise from many of its past customers.

Owner Michael Christensen feels that the company's dedication to the customer's vision is the foundation of its success. Aside from building custom designed homes, it also has a team of experts in remodeling, commercial construction, and disaster restoration. He explains on the website,

"Our diverse team of professionals, with years of experience in their fields, includes architects, engineers, and designers who can design your home entirely and assist you in bringing your own vision to reality."

With the new website at http://peakonebuilders.com/ which is already "live," customers will be able to take advantage of the many added features that will make their experience with Peak One Builders & Restoration even more helpful.

The features that visitors will find useful on the site include a weekly blog for those who are interested in learning little tidbits of information about custom home building. Some of their most recent topics include: what to look for with handicap remodeling contractors in Scottsdale, creating a backyard oasis in Scottsdale, and popular pool finishes for pool remodeling in Scottsdale. The blog covers topics on building a home from the ground up, custom remodeling, and disaster restoration among other things.

Peak One Builders is also very active with the popular foundation Jared Allen's Homes 4 Wounded Warriors, which is a 501c3 public organization that was created to raise funds to build or modify the homes of America's injured military veterans so that they are handicap accessible and comfortable. Many veterans return home with severe disabilities that can make everyday life difficult to adjust to. With the help of the foundation, they can get their homes modified so that they are wheelchair accessible or able to support a number of living situations that would otherwise be impossible. They say that they are proud to join forces with such an organization and provide help for one of their own. For those who are interested in learning more about Peak One Builders & Restoration and becoming part of their online family so that you don't miss a beat, visit their new company website today.
