

AC Man Houston Now Offers Seasonal Furnace Repair In Katy TX

October 18, 2016

October 18, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Summer is well and truly over, and it seems as if Fall is being skipped, heading straight for Winter. When the seasons change, it is very important that people make sure that their furnace is in perfect condition, so that it is able to cope with the upcoming colder months. AC Man Houston, a business in Houston, TX, has put new services in place to ensure that people are able to have their furnace checked, serviced, and repaired if needed. As one of the most respected furnace repair Katy TX companies, people have peace of mind of being able to get through the Winter.

With regards to what needs to be done, Don from AC Man Houston explains: "It is case by case dependent on whether the client needs a new furnace, whole new HVAC system, or just general maintenance."

It is quite rare for the Houston area to have below freezing temperatures. In fact, on average, it only happens about ten times per year, always overnight, between December and March. During the day time, temperatures always raise above freezing again. However, that is not to say that it doesn't get cold, the company says. And, because there are so few months of cold weather, many people do not look after their furnace properly.

The heating repair Katy TX company wants to make sure that people properly check their furnaces, so that they are not left out in the cold on those rare occasions that it does get below freezing. Furthermore, it seems that this year may be an exceptionally cold year, which means people will need to use their heating systems more frequently. Although it is not expected to freeze during the daytime very often, it is expected that the weather will be very cold.

AC Man Houston is a Certified American Standard Dealer, which indicates that the company offers the best in terms of service, maintenance, and repair, and that they have a strong focus on energy efficiency as well. The company also has numerous certifications and registrations in place to further emphasize their high quality service. They encourage anyone to contact them as soon as possible in order to make sure that they are winter ready.
