October 14, 2016 -

The Disaster Response Team (DRT) is still open after the Hurricane Matthew to help people and businesses with the damages they received.

The aim of the full service restoration company based in Panama City is to increase the awareness of both residential and commercial customers in restoring their properties after disasters. Their lives will also be brought back together by the reliable and fast service offered twenty-four hours a day and seven days a week.

With the damages received, the certified and trained technicians from the company will handle these effectively. They also work with insurance companies and they offer assistance in providing an insurance adjuster necessary in the paperwork and documentation needed for claim processing.

Businesses and people whose properties have received damages could benefit from the help provided. The big loss or small leak brought by flooding behind cabinets, hidden areas, carpets and walls demand attention.

These damages can usually manifest several years or weeks after the loss occurs. The destructive waters usually create the need to manage these losses quickly and correctly.

The experience and equipment of the staff can help handle the water damage. They also have the tools and equipments needed including water removal equipment, germicides, anti-microbial treatments and sanitizing agents. High-technology drying equipments like high-speed air movers and industrial grade dehumidifiers are also utilized to give the best results.

?We previously had a problem because of Hurricane Matthew. Their crew did the tasks well in a meticulous and caring demeanor. If I will face another issue, I will ask help from them. They have been a top-notch business to work with. I suggest that you contact them as well,? says Eddie Hill of their service.

It is expected that businesses and people will get the assistance of the company for a full service-restoration in Panama City. The damages left by Hurricane Matthew will be removed and resolved right away for their peace of mind. No matter how big or complicated the issue is, the DRT has the tools and cutting-edge technology as resources to use in handling the job.
