Zombiedisasterkits.com in Vancouver, Washington, wants to help people get through the upcoming flu season without getting sick. In order to achieve this, the company is promoting its My BioDefense Sanitizing Wand and App.

Jillian Gregg, a spokesperson for the company, says, "One of the best ways to avoid contracting the flu or any spreadable illness is to sanitize. Our wand and app are designed specifically for that purpose."

Gregg explains that the company's sanitizing wand helps to kill up to 99 percent of all germs, which effectively helps households boost their efforts in fighting against the flu. The company's MyBioDefense App is designed to work with the wand, both of which can be ordered from the Amazon marketplace. Meanwhile, in addition to promoting the mentioned products, the company also wanted to provide an update for health care providers for fighting influenza from the Center For Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

"If we could get people and physicians using the sanitizing wand," says Gregg, "we may just be able to spend a season without hospitals filling up and people getting really sick due to the newest strain."

The CDC has reported several hundred cases of influenza infection with parotitis during the 2014-2015 flu season. The CDC stated that previously only about a dozen or so cases were reported where parotitis followed the influenza infection. The organization states that while it can be found in patients of all ages, it is very common in school aged children and in males, and it appears to occur more with certain strains of the flu virus.

The CDC has also reported that cases of parotitis have grown substantially this year, and that physicians as well as people should take steps to ensure that they are protecting themselves, their patients, and their families from these often serious strains of the flu virus. Gregg says that her company fully agrees with protection and urges everyone to consider sanitizing as a defense against the virus.

She says that the MyBioDefense wand can kill germs, eliminating the risk for flu virus infection, which is particularly important this year as the CDC has confirmed that the flu virus is alive and well and should begin its path of destruction in the next few weeks.
