June 10, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Total Paintball Gear is excited to announce the availability of the latest Spyder MR100 Paintball Guns on its online store. This announcement comes at the end of the company's annual restocking exercise. During this exercise, its old stock was cleared out and replaced by new stock. As such, shoppers can now purchase the latest edition of MR100s from the Total Paintball Gear online store.

The latest Spyder MR100 has been upgraded to cater for the needs of milsim enthusiasts. It features a 12-inch micro-ported barrel, a two finger trigger, a clamping feed neck and an adjustable shoulder stock. These features give it an appearance of a real-life tactical rifle ? which is something which milsim enthusiasts look out for.

The marker is also fitted with an efficient Eko Valve System. This is a ground-breaking system whose patent is still being processed. It gives the MR100 the capability to make up to 1,600 shots from a 20oz tank of CO2. Such efficiency usually comes with a high price tag. When coupled with the semi-automatic firing mode, the Eko Valve System places the MR100 ahead of other markers in its price range.

According to sources at Total Paintball Gear, anyone shopping for the Spyder MR100 can choose from a range of delightful color options. The markers are available in black, olive or olive green. Each marker features an elegant aluminum body with a finish in its respective color. The black marker, for instance, can be viewed on the following link <http://www.totalpaintballgear.com/kingman-spyder-mr100-pro-paintball-gun-black.html>.

The Spyder MR100 is one of the few markers best suited for both scenario and speedball. Most markers are built for one or the other. The MR100 has the robustness which makes it perfect for scenario. It has a small profile which makes it perfect for speedball. Its milsim build only adds to its versatility.

Ultimately, the MR100 is suited for anyone who is shopping for a scenario, speedball or milsim marker. It is especially perfectly suited for players who desire a versatile and flexible marker. Total Paintball Gear is currently selling it at $99.99 which is a fair price given its excellent qualities.
