We're scheduling our first guests now and will have our first show posted on October 31st. In the meantime, check out our cover art and feel free to give us some feedback on it."

The Portland Business Show is a free podcast that aims to help entrepreneurs in the Portland area connect, network, and grow their companies. In so doing, they can collectively contribute to personal financial growth, while also supporting the local economy. For many, true entrepreneurship is not possible without excellent collaboration, creating an atmosphere in which everybody can learn from each other to achieve sustainable growth.

In order to grow their audience and overall reach, the Portland Show is engaging in a strong social media campaign as well. "We really want to build a community of entrepreneurs," adds Kalon Wiggins. "Our vision is to have some of Portland's best and most established business owners together, as well as everyone looking at starting a business, and enabling them to communicate with each other, learn from each other, and share insights with each other. To achieve this, we have also launched our Facebook page, and encourage everyone to like it."

The Facebook page of the podcast show is available at <https://www.facebook.com/portlandbusinessshow>. It will be used to share pertinent information on entrepreneurship in Portland, and also to keep people up to date with upcoming podcasts, interview line ups, and more. Additionally, it offers entrepreneurs the opportunity to engage in conversations and share information with each other. Although only recently launched, the Facebook page is gathering a lot of interest, and there seems to be a buzz of excitement about the upcoming podcast.
