Traditionally, bunions are treated by using a splint, which supports the toe where the bunion is located and then is wrapped around the foot. Unfortunately, many people find the splint to be incredibly uncomfortable and thus, often look for an alternative. Minden, NV company DenadaDance believes they have created a bunion splint alternative through their toe spacer set.

"Nobody wants to have bunions, but they are incredibly common," says DenadaDance's Elena Vera. "They are also very painful, and it is vital that people treat them in order to retain their quality of life and mobility. While splints work, they don't really make people any more comfortable. We feel that our toe spacer is the right alternative for this, ensuring that people can be comfortable while allowing their bunions to heal."

The toe spacers set comes with four individual spacers, made up of two large and two medium ones. As such, they fit virtually every toe, and there is one for each foot. Furthermore, they are fitted with loops so that they remain securely in place. DenadaDance has also pointed out that the spacers are made from a comfortable, durable material, so that they do not cause any discomfort or irritation.

Since having been released, the spacers have received many positive reviews. In fact, the set has become a 4.5 star rated item on Amazon. People have expressed appreciation on how comfortable the spacers are, and that they can wear them all day, every day, during various activities. One even went hiking while wearing the spacers, and had no problems at all. Another reviewer mentions having arthritis, which often makes it difficult for her to wear a bunion splint or other devices. She was happy to mention that the DenadaDance spacers have given her the relief that she has been looking for.

"We want to make sure that people can find comfort for their feet as much as possible," adds Elena Vera. "We often forget to look after our feet properly, sticking them in shoes that are too tight, too small, and too high, and not caring for them either, and this has consequences. Luckily, these can now be mitigated through our toe spacers set."
