Somasix, a company in Wexford, Ireland, that provides children's games and learning products, has recently announced that they have launched new packaging for their ABC fridge magnets. The company points out that they have designed a practical new package for their 62 piece children's magnetic letters and numbers. This set is intended to help children learn.

Obada Yousif from the company says, "We feel that this new packaging offers many benefits, aside from the obvious aesthetics. We have also designed a game that is imprinted on the bottom of the box for additional learning opportunities for your children."

Yousif states that the new packaging of the ABC game offers a sturdy handle so that children can carry the game to school or anywhere they want, and that the new package is also more convenient for storage. "In short, it is a brightly colored, child friendly and environmentally friendly package," Yousif states.

The game set contains magnetic numbers and letters, which can help children learn the alphabet and numbers long before kindergarten. Yousif states that children as young as one year old are gaining benefit from the magnetic numbers and letters and that parents have contacted the company to express their appreciation of the learning game and the ease of use for younger children.

Somasix is a provider of learning games for kids. The company works on the philosophy that learning should be fun and offers quality products that meet USA and European safety standards. The company states that all of their learning products are manufactured in the USA only in FDA approved facilities to ensure that they offer the safest learning fun for children.

Products are tested by the company with rigorous methods and contain 100 percent natural materials free of artificial colors or preservatives that could be harmful to children. Yousif states that they work to ensure that every product they sell offers a level of safety that puts parents' minds at ease.

Those interested can see the new packaging for the company's ABC magnet set on their official website, where reviews from parents about the products can also be seen.
