November 14, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Status Transportation celebrated its anniversary last Friday in a colorful event that highlighted all the plans they have for their owner operators.

Held at the company's headquarters in Florida, this year's Status Transportation anniversary was all about their partners, and mostly their owner operator partners to whom they credited their success to. The event also acted as a great place to outline the company's main achievements, and especially the Status dispatch soft; a system built by the company for the sole purposes of improving their trucking operations. Besides the software, the company's partnership with Acemco, a leading truck and trailer repair equipment manufacturing company, as well as the revision of owner operator privileges also headlined the celebrations.

Speaking during the event, the company's founder and CEO said, "They were impressed by their progress over the five years they have been in business. He also noted some of the benefits that had been brought by the company's steadfast progress in meeting the FMCSA final rule and the launch of an owner operator focused website."

?I would like to inform everyone seated here that Carrier Web have allowed us to install the ELD software on some of our trucks as we await to finalize the FMCSA rule," Mr. Erik Chavez, a representative from the company noted. "This will greatly improve the efficiency of the selected truck as well as increase safety and accountability to the drivers. I also hope every owner operator in here has visited our new site; statustrucks.com. It is a great site that will help all of us connect and enhance communication as we do our jobs.?

The anniversary was also graced by prominent figures in the trucking world, drivers and driving school students who wish to become owner operators someday. ?However, most of them had been invited to witness the launch of the Status dispatch software,? as noted by one blogger while in Status Transportation reviews.

?With us today are some of the leading authorities in the trucking business, and there are all here to share this great day with us as well as to witness the in-house revolutionary software that we promise to shakeup how things are done in the business,? Mr. Erik said amid cheers from the guests.

Mr. Erik also took the chance to invite all guests in attendance to campaign for the company in the outside market and invite other owner operators as possible to work with them.

?If you already don?t know this, there are hundreds of owner operators looking for a company to work for. Go tell them about our great policies and friendliness to business partners, so that we can all steer this great company forward,? Mr. Erik said.

With the remarkable success Status transportation have had in their five years in operation, they can only hope that the spike of owner operators in the country will help them find the best partners and perhaps grow to become one of the biggest trucking companies in the country.
