

Cardea Luxe Publishes Article On Peptides In Skin Care

November 21, 2016

November 21, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Skin care company, Cardea Luxe in Reno, Nevada, announced that they have recently published a new online article titled "The Benefits of Peptides in Skin Care." The company states that the article contains information that consumers need to know about peptides and how beneficial they are to skin care routines.

Joseph Meli with Cardea Luxe Skin Care says, "Choosing a skin care product should be about what it can actually do for you and not what the company claims it can do. Our goal with this informative article is to provide information about peptides in skin care and how products that contain peptides can be more effective than those that don't."

Meli states that peptides can help the skin to produce more collagen which is needed for firmer, younger looking skin. "When we age, collagen breaks down and when production is not stimulated, that much needed collagen is not replaced," says Meli. "This results in skin that shows fine lines and wrinkles and eventually begins to sag. Peptides can help to alleviate this issue."

Meli explains that the newly published article outlines the many benefits of peptides and gives an oversight into how they are used by the skin to produce collagen. The piece covers amino acids and their role in skin care as well as point out the benefits of other ingredients and the products that contain them.

Cardea Luxe Skin Care manufactures an eye cream and other products that contain peptides, as well as various other healthy ingredients. All of these have been found to help reverse signs of aging and bring back youthful, firmer skin. Meli states that the company has a number of articles available at <http://www.cardealuxe.com> that outline the ingredients in their skin care products and explain in depth how these ingredients work to benefit the skin.

He states that the company's goal is not merely to offer skin care products, but to educate the public about the ingredients used in those products and how they are beneficial to the skin. Those interested in learning more about the company and their skin care products can visit them online.
