According to Matthew Snider, ?Our website was developed with the motivation of enhancing the process which people take as a conscious effort toward improving their lifestyle. The improvement can relate to finances, relationships, self-confidence or enjoyment of the journey. We commit 100% to help you obtain the tools and knowledge necessary to get you on the path toward your personal goals.?

He continues, ?The tips which are provided on the site are ones which can be incorporated into every life, regardless of the starting point. Age, economic hardship, knowledge, education and other factors do not need to presuppose that an individual will be unable to succeed. Everyone experiences failures and setbacks of one type or another. The differences in the result are due to how disappointment and failure are handled individually. Learning from the response to failure of others, particularly well-known individuals, is a step toward moving forward after a failure of any size.?

A recent article is titled ?5 Famous Failures To Learn From [With Actionable Tips]" and includes some of the best-known individuals from history and current events who have experienced one or more failed businesses or experiences. Historically, the individuals in the blog article include Walt Disney, the Wright brothers, and Abraham Lincoln. Today's persons are Oprah Winfrey and Bill Gates.
