November 28, 2016 -
GrowUpSmart, the educational toys and games company, has recently announced that their Smart Tactics Backgammon game has been tested to ensure that it completely complies with United States toy safety standards. The company states that compliance testing was performed by Intertek.

GrowUpSmart offers a variety of chess and backgammon games for sale through the Amazon marketplace. The company states that ensuring that all of their games are tested for toy safety standards compliance is an important part of their overall customer service.

"Our ultimate goal is to provide fun, educational, and safe toys and games for children," says Martin Reinhold with the company. "The fact that these games are all tested for compliance through Intertek just shows our customers how dedicated to safety our company actually is."

Intertek helps companies to develop and execute testing plans for products to determine their overall compliance with governmental and environmental regulations. The organization's testing services are tailored to meet a number of industry needs and regulations, including those of REACH, CPSIA, RoHS, California

Proposition 65, and many others. Intertek helps to determine regulation compliance with regards to materials used as well as reliability.

GrowUpSmart's backgammon game has passed the stringent compliance testing requirements of the organization. The company explains that this game offers a number of educational benefits in addition to its safety and environmentally friendly compliance.

"Our games are designed to help children learn," says Reinhold. "Backgammon is a strategic game that can help children to develop a number of key skills, and is a game that has been enjoyed for thousands of years."

The backgammon game offered by the company includes a foldable board with felt interior, dice cups, doubling cube, and an instruction booklet for those new to the game. GrowUpSmart states that their goal is to foster education in children and adults through more traditional game play as opposed to electronics such as video games and computers.

More about the game's safety compliance and other products offered by the company can be seen on their website and on their official Amazon marketplace seller's page.
