

Northwest Home Buyers Releases New Information On How To Sell A Home As Is

November 29, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

While the financial crisis of 2007 is said to be over now, some people are still recovering and struggling. Additionally, this has completely changed the home buyers, sellers, and investors market. Although people are better off, there continue to be some situations in which they need to sell their homes, and quickly. Northwest Home Buyers, a property investment company in Eagle, ID, has therefore released new information on <http://www.northwesthomebuyers.com> to help people achieve just that.

"There are countless reasons as to why people may need to sell their home very quickly," says Andrew Wheeler from Northwest Home Buyers. "While most of us have heard of the threat of foreclosure, it could also be that a couple has divorced, that they inherited the property, that they have to relocate suddenly for work, and so on. Selling a property usually takes a lot of time, not in the least because most people have to invest in it before they can sell it for good money. With us, it is possible to sell a home fast, and as is."

The company has created a simple and quick "Buy My Home" service, which only takes four steps to complete. First, people contact Northwest Home Buyers to provide some details on the property. Next, they make an appointment to show the property and discuss some details. Northwest Home Buyers then makes as offer and, if the home owners accept, they will be provided with the money straight away.

To further explain exactly how this process works, Northwest Home Buyers has released a new blog post, "How to Sell Your Home as Is", to ensure that people can truly understand how this service can benefit them. "Most sellers can expect to get an offer for 60-80% of their home's market value," adds Andrew Wheeler. "While that might seem low at first, consider the costs it would take to get a maximum offer. First, the house will need to be in excellent condition. That means you'll need to spend money to give your house some curb appeal. In most cases, you'll get back little more than 74% of the total amount you put into repairs and upgrades."
