November 23, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Blanton Bendall of Southern Piano Service, a popular piano tuner and piano repair and restoration specialist, is now offering even more services to his Richmond customers: piano repair and piano pestringing.

Bendall has provided a wide range of piano services to his clients in the Central Virginia and the Greater Richmond area for years, particularly the surrounding counties, including Henrico, Hanover, Goochland and Louisa. But now, he is also offering his full range of services to the entire Richmond area. His piano services include piano tuning, piano moving and storage, repair, restoration and even restringing. He also takes care of pianos at numerous schools and churches.

Restringing pianos is a highly complex service. If just a few strings need replacing, Bendall says can easily take care of that during a regular piano tuning - and he does. However, the term "restringing pianos" goes much further than replacing a string or three: it means replacing all strings.

And that's not all. When the strings really need replacing, the supporting hardware that holds them in place inside the piano will generally also need to be replaced or rebuilt. "It's a huge project," says Bendall, "and we'll move your piano into our workshop while we work on it, and back to your home once it's done." Bendall partners with professional piano movers to ensure that the piano is safe throughout the entire process.

Fortunately, piano restringing is not part of routine maintenance. It generally has to be done just once every few decades at most. But when it's needed, getting it done can make a huge difference and literally restore the sound of a piano to its former beauty.

In addition to his expanded Richmond piano repair and restringing services that are designed to make a piano sound beautiful, Bendall also offers complete piano restoration services that can make pianos look as beautiful as they used to.

Bendall is happy to advise piano owners about what kind of repair a piano may need, or whether it may actually require a full restringing. In fact, he usually can take care of minor repairs during his piano tuning appointments.

With the holidays coming up, he is rather busy, but he can still fit in a few tunings and minor repairs to make his clients' pianos sound great in time for Christmas. Restringing will take longer, however.

On his website, SouthernPianoService.com, Bendall provides extensive expert advice on how to care for a piano so it will remain in peak playing condition.

His phone number is 804-677-2416. He is generally able to respond most quickly to text messages. More information about Richmond piano repair and restringing can be found here: <http://southernpianoservice.com/richmond-piano-repair-restringing>.
