

Lightening Deal Announced For Digital Cooking Thermometer

December 15, 2016

December 15, 2016 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Vancouver, Washington based Tisha's Choices, which owns ZombieDisasterKits.com, has announced that their popular digital cooking thermometer will be part of Amazon's Lightning Deals. Amazon offers these special deals throughout the holiday season on a variety of gift ideas. The Lightning Deal for the company's digital thermometer for cooking is scheduled for December 17, 2016 and will be held at 7:55 p.m. PST.

"It's a great chance to get our amazing thermometer at a highly discounted rate," says Jillian Gregg with the company. "This is one of those must have products for the bakers and cooks in your life."

Jillian Gregg states that the digital thermometer is designed to provide the most accurate temperature possible to avoid undercooked foods or uncertainties about the temperature of baby formula. She says that the thermometer at normal price costs less than the price of a burned steak, and at the offered Amazon Lightning Deal, customers can get it for a much lower cost.

"If you have a cook in your family, or someone who loves to grill, or a newlywed, this would make the perfect holiday gift," Jillian Gregg says. "It's a great choice for those who seem to have everything. We all have that one person on our gift list that we just never know what to get. Get them a digital thermometer and let them cook up a storm for the New Year."

The company states that their thermometer is designed to provide a reading within just three to six seconds, and indicates the exact temperature every time so that foods are always cooked perfectly. It features a safety first aspect where the probe must be snapped open in order to power the thermometer on. The safety switch ensures that the wand will not turn on when buttons are pressed accidentally, which helps to save on battery life, according to Jillian.

The company offers a complete lifetime warranty on the Quick Temp Digital Cooking Thermometer when purchased through Zombiedisasterkits.com. Gregg states that customers will absolutely love the thermometer and if they don't, the company will send the cost back to them. Those interested can learn more on the company's official website or through their Amazon seller's page.
