The Immortalitea Company is a business in Grandville, MI, that is committed to improving people's health and well being through natural teas. In so doing, they also want to protect the planet by only using 100% chemical free tea leaves, purchased from a network of small local growers, which in turn means they contribute significantly to the economy of poorer communities. They are proud to announce that they have recently introduced the whole flower hibiscus tea to the market.

Margo Chupeido from The Immortalitea Company says: "Hibiscus tea, as we know, has been a traditional drink to give to people who have been traveling in the desert. It is a popular flower in the field of herbal medicine, being used all over the world. Some 20,200 different scientific studies have looked into it, mainly because it is such a powerful herb. We are very happy to be able to offer it to our customers, so that they can enjoy improved health."

To demonstrate some of the benefits of the whole flower hibiscus tea, The Immortalitea Company has released a hibiscus tea comparison video. This video demonstrates the three key health benefits of this powerful flower, including maintaining a healthy cardiovascular system, providing the highest levels of antioxidants found in any natural product, and relieving various aches and ailments without needing to resort to chemical drugs.

The Immortalitea Company spent a long time finding the perfect hibiscus, eventually settling on a Mt. Emei community run farm in the Sichuan province of China. The farm uses a labor intensive method of preserving the bud, but it is the best method around. The result is that the price of the hibiscus tea is slightly higher than for other Immortalitea products, but it continues to offer the best value for money.

The tea is truly taking the world by storm, with people raving about its flavor and health benefits. "I can truthfully say that the quality of these Hibiscus (Sorrel) dried flowers are exactly the same quality of those I have grown and had in my native country," says Margo on the company's website.
