January 06, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Lynnea Peters with Mutual of Omaha Bank in Tampa, Florida, has announced a number of new funding options for small businesses in the Tampa Bay area. Lynnea is excited to announce that small business owners now have somewhere to go for funds and other products, where they can build personal relationships.

"I'm excited for the opportunity to serve the Tampa Bay market area," says Peters. "I believe that with my unique ability to build personal relationships I will be able to provide unique commercial financial services for small business owners."

Peters states that she can help business owners with a number of ideas and resources that will enable them to operate and grow their companies. Mutual of Omaha Bank offers a number of small business funding products including deposit accounts and treasury management services. Peters states that she is happy to discuss potential financial products with any business owner in the Tampa Bay area.

"I am excited to further the goals and vision of Mutual of Omaha Bank," Peters states. "And, I'm really excited to be able to offer these great financial products to area businesses. Together we can make Tampa Bay a profitable place to be."

Peters says that the company offers a number of flexible financing solutions that encompass all business owners from small, individually owned companies to larger commercial companies as well as commercial real estate lending programs. In addition, the company provides a wide range of other business resources such as secure payment solutions and one funding sources for payment transactions.

Peters says that many small business owners struggle because they are unsure of where to go for needed capital. She points out that she wants business owners in the area to feel comfortable in visiting her office to learn more about the funding options that may be available to them. She says that she hopes business owners will turn to her whether they require startup funding for a new business venture.
