

New Facebook Group Offers Free Training And Resources On How To Work From Home And Make Money Online

January 03, 2017

January 03, 2017 -
The New Facebook Group "Internet Marketing Success Strategies" provides free training and resources to help its members work from home and make money online.

Sponsored by My Favorite Web Stuff, a blog filled with information and resources on how to earn an income online, the Facebook Group goes much further by providing entire training series that are normally paid products - yet in the group they are completely free to its members.

In addition, it also offers plugins and other resources that will help the members market their products and services more effectively. And that's not all.

Elisabeth Kuhn, Ph.D., the creator of the group, has been an internet marketer and online marketing consultant for more than 8 years, and will be actively involved in the group, answering questions and responding to requests for additional resources. She also may provide hands-on help (for a special members-only fee) when members request it, at least on a limited basis.

At the beginning of 2017, many people make New Year's resolutions, and one of the most popular goals is earning more money. Internet marketing offers the opportunity to do just that, and earn an extra income while continuing to work at a regular job.

"Within the next few days, credit card bills will start arriving in people's mailboxes, forcing people to face just how much they spent on their Christmas shopping," says Kuhn. "Learning how to create an extra stream of income or three can really help with paying those bills off more quickly."

Currently, the resources include training on list building (a crucial skill), niche marketing, and using PLR (private label rights products) creatively for list building and creating products, among other things.

The group will also include plenty of training on affiliate marketing, which is a great way to start an internet marketing business because it allows its members to earn an income without having to create their own products first. Additional topics include blogging and product creation.

There will also be tools, such as plugins that will help simplify otherwise complicated tasks. The first one will help make Facebook advertising more effective.

As the group grows, its members will enjoy being part of a community of internet marketers and entrepreneurs who exchange ideas and give and receive support and encouragement.

Kuhn will be an active member of the group. She'll answer questions and provide advice on a daily basis. Members can also request hands-on help with certain projects for a discounted members-only fee. This service will be available on a first come first served basis.
