Delray Beach Halfway Houses offer a living location for clients who need a place for sober living opportunities. The halfway house in Delray Beach is a comfortable and safe living environment for those recovering from substance abuse.

Delray Beach FL: Delray Beach Halfway Houses is now accepting sober living clients. The comfortable and safe houses are located in the small town of Delray Beach, north of Boca Raton and south of West Palm Beach. The location incorporates one of the top ten beaches in Florida and the world-famous Atlantic Avenue. The climate and activities available to those coming out of substance environments helps to lessen the likelihood of a relapse. Both men and women can apply for housing in one of the houses.

For those accepted at one of the halfway houses Delray Beach participants, it is important to note that the houses are not a rehab center. They are an environment conducive to long-term recovery. The goal is to provide structured housing for clients who have attended in-patient treatment. The houses provide accountability, structure and a safe environment for clients.

According to a spokesperson for the organization, "Sober living is an active environment promoting sobriety. Everyone within the community is pushing to keep their sobriety as well as helping others keep theirs. Sober living includes a sober living house, sober parties and BBQ's, trips to the beach, trips on the boats, snorkeling, paddle boarding, hiking, and camping trips."

Sober living is not a rehabilitation center. It benefits those who are in the process of recovery, but is not prepared to handle medical monitoring of drug detoxification. The living environment is also not intended to serve as an adult day care facility. Those who are accepted as sober living clients must be ready to get sober and stay sober.

A halfway house is an active environment which promotes sober living. All those in the community are desirous of maintaining their sobriety as well as helping others to maintain theirs. A halfway house includes a house manager on site with a variety of activities to keep the interest of the residents.
