

Australian Dentists Clinic's New Website Helps People Looking For A Dentist

January 20, 2017

January 20, 2017 -
The Australian Dentists Clinic has recently launched a new website that is designed to offer essential information to people in Australia about the modern dental services and treatments. The Australian Dentists Clinic, which has branches all over Australia, provides a number of dental procedures, and the new site keeps patients informed with listings of various treatment choices.

The Australian Dentists Clinic provides general dentistry as well as cosmetic and emergency services which include root canal treatments, Invisalign braces, dental crowns and implants, wisdom teeth extraction and dental veneers.

Meanwhile, in line with their goal of helping people in terms of dental costs and also in compliance with the Department of Health's Child Dental Benefits Schedule (CDBS), the clinic offers free dental care to children aged between 2 - 17 years old. The CDBS, which started on January 1, 2014, offers access to children who belong to eligible families. Families can contact the Department of Human Services to check if their children are eligible.

"Our dental team always stresses to our patients that it is crucial to keep up with dental care and prevention is always better than a cure," says Nick McMahon from the Australian Dentists Clinic. "We want you to enjoy healthy teeth and gums and part of that is visiting your dentist on a regular basis."

The clinic's website offers in-depth information on Invisalign treatment and other procedures, including dental fillings, teeth whitening, splints for teeth grinding, dentures, oral health, and periodontal disease. Other vital information provided on the website include how a general dentist will check the dental health of a patient, when dental crowns are needed, when a root canal is required, the use of dental bridges, and various trends in cosmetic dentistry.

"Our goal is to help people save money and time when it comes to dental care," says McMahon. "We want you to be completely informed of your options whether that's for implants or braces, and we want our patients to know that they can rely on us for those emergency dental situations that may happen from time to time, hence why many of our dental clinics are open 7 days a week."

Mr McMahon says that the website's goal is to provide information to patients so that they can make informed decisions on their dental care. He states that too many patients rely on advice from friends and family as opposed to visiting a dentist to have certain issues resolved, and says that the site covers dental conditions and treatment options as well as what patients can expect from specific procedures.

Those interested can visit the website of Australian Dentists Clinic and check out the services offered and the various specials for new patients, such as the free Invisalign consultation at our Melbourne CBD dental clinic.
