2017 has acknowledged the beginning of a new era for South Shores Recovery (SSR), a drug/alcohol detox and residential treatment program located in Orange County, California. South Shores Recovery has officially been awarded an accreditation from The Joint Commission Health Organization (JCAHO), as a symbol of quality that reflects an organization's commitment to excellence and meeting certain performance standards. South Shores Recovery joins a prestigious list that includes the very best behavioral health treatment facilities and health care organizations in the United States.

Aiming to lay a foundation for long-term sobriety in a safe and caring environment, South Shores Recovery's tireless efforts have already earned them respect within addiction recovery communities. They now find themselves listed alongside some of the most acclaimed treatment centers in the nation.

South Shores Recovery is led by co-founders Eric Botelho, President and Josh Smith, CEO, who work with a team of certified treatment professionals to help patients overcome their physical dependency and break the chains of addiction.

"This is great news for all of the team at South Shores," said Eric Botelho. "It's an acknowledgement of our hard work, and it's something that will allow us to expand and to do more for this community," said Josh Smith, CEO.

South Shores Recovery is a prominent part of a larger network of Orange County recovery centers, all of which aim to tackle what has become a serious problem within the nation. Utilizing the most up-to-date tools and resources available, South Shores' staff will create a personalized curriculum consisting of evidence-based treatment and psychotherapy, as well as a variety of holistic and experiential therapies.

Here are some more reasons why people should consider South Shores Recovery (SSR):

- Currently operates a 12-bed facility, with one-on-one care for each individual patient
- Incorporates loved ones into the treatment process
- Treats the whole person, not just the addiction
- Maintains respect and protection for clients' privacy throughout the treatment process
- Will work with clients to help determine which level of care is right for them
- SSR treatment counselors will stay in contact with clients throughout their entire recovery program

The goal of the Joint Commission is to improve the state of the healthcare industry, while the goal of South Shores is to help those in need. Together, their partnership is one that the whole county will benefit from.

South Shores Recovery (SSR) is a 12-bed detox and a gender-specific residential program located in Orange County in Southern California.
