The Immortalitea Company in Grandville, Michigan, has announced the official launch of their Gynostemma. The company states that this product, which is grown on small farms, is now available to the public.

"If you don't know what Gynostemma is," says Ralph Kenney with The Immortalitea Company, "then you are missing out on something that could literally change your life."

Kenney states that their Gynostemma pentaphyllum or jiaogulan is grown sustainably on small farms, and says that they work directly with farmers to ensure that the process adheres to organic and chemical free standards. Tea from jiaogulan has been found to provide a number of health benefits, according to the company.

For centuries, the company states, the tea has been consumed in China as a means of increasing longevity. Kenney says that when prepared and consumed properly, the herbal tea can help to improve circulation, aid in sleep, and help to improve memory function.

"More than 5,600 scientific studies have been done on this herb," Kenney says. "No other herb in the world has been proven to have as many health benefits as Gynostemma or jiaogulan as it's known in China."

The Immortalitea Company is a family operated business that was launched in 2004. The company states that their goals have always been to provide consumers with healthy supplements and herbal remedies that have been found to help them healthier lives. Kenney says that their teas are not grown by corporate suppliers. All of their jiaogulan are grown in pure soil and raised on trellises to eliminate the need for chemicals.

The company states that those wishing to supercharge their immune systems and ensure a more natural metabolism than what is currently found in weight loss pills and other supplements should contact them to learn more about how this herbal tea can help. Kenney states that the company is now offering free shipping on orders over $50 and has a strict no-questions-asked refund policy for those who return their orders.

Those interested in learning more can read about the health benefits of this herbal tea and find ordering information on the company's official website.
