January 31, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Rabbit Expert is a new website that is designed to provide rabbit care information. The website offers comprehensive information on everything from rabbit breeds to health, food, cages, and hutches, including product reviews of popular rabbit necessities.

Heather Collins, a spokesperson for Rabbit Expert says, "The new site is dedicated to those who want to own a rabbit. We know how difficult rabbit care can be, and so we wanted to offer a place where new owners can find the information they need."

Collins says that caring for rabbits is much different than caring for cats, dogs, and other domesticated pets. She states that whether people are looking to breed rabbits or just want a cuddly pet for indoors, the site will help them to learn what they need to know in order to care for their rabbits properly. The site provides information to those who know nothing about caring for rabbits as well as more advanced information for those who would like to go into breeding.

"Rabbits can be somewhat needy," Collins says. "Because of this, owning a rabbit can often be a difficult and even exhausting task. Rabbits are also very loveable and owning one can be awesome, provided you know how to properly care for them."

The newly launched website offers reviews of various rabbit products, discussions, and other information pertinent to caring for various breeds. Collins says that anyone who owns or is considering owning a rabbit will be able to find everything they need to know about properly raising that pet, including which cages are best suited for which rabbits and comprehensive information on understanding breeds and feeding habits. She states that anyone who would like to participate in discussions on the site can also do so and that the website takes suggestions on what information consumers would like to see in the future. The website claims that their goal is to be a one-stop shop for all rabbit information and urges consumers to contact them if they don't see the information that they are seeking.
