January 30, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Fort Lauderdale, Florida based natural dog treats company, Wyldlife Pets recently announced the new benefits of their Bully Sticks for dogs. The company points out that the natural bully sticks offer a healthier chew than rawhide and other products.

"First of all, our bully sticks are 100 percent all natural angus beef," says Colin Campbell, a spokesperson for the company. "While some rawhide snacks may also be all natural, our Bully Sticks are easier to digest for dogs, which makes them a much safer alternative to rawhide chews."

Campbell states that the company's dog treats contain no fillers, no additives, and no hormones that could be dangerous for domesticated pets. He states that they are made for all sizes and breeds of dogs, and have no chemicals or preservatives.

Rawhide treats, the company states, are difficult for dogs to digest, and often contain chemically processed ingredients. Campbell says that Bully Sticks from Wyldlife Pets are a much safer option because they are natural beef, which means they digest easily.

"Rawhide can damage the teeth of your dogs and because they are not always natural, they can cause issues with general health," Campbell states.

He goes on to state that treats from Wyldlife Pets help to promote healthy cartilage in the joints of dogs and offer a great occupational chew that has been shown to be effective in calming anxious dogs. The tendons in the treats help to floss the teeth, promoting clean and healthy teeth and gums. Campbell says that because there are no chemicals used in the makeup of the treats, they offer a much safer chew for dogs of all sizes. In addition, the company provides a number of size options for the treats.

The treats for dogs are beef tendons, made naturally from grain fed cattle. The company states that they have tested their products to ensure their safety for dogs, and Campbell says that they have yet to meet a dog who did not love the flavor of the treats. Pet owners interested in learning more about the benefits of Bully Sticks over rawhide chews can visit the company on their official website.
