Carpet Long Island offers the necessary tools and experience to restore carpets to optimum condition following damage due to water or fire damage. Restoration of rugs that have been water damaged must be done as soon as possible to avoid creation of mold.

Long Island NY: Carpet Long Island is pleased to announce that its professionals have the knowledge and experience to restore carpets to top notch condition even after water and/or fire damage occurs. The effects of a flood, water leak or fire can be highly unhealthy. The moisture build-up leads to mold and mildew, which can be more unpleasant than the direct effects of the water. Mold can lead to allergic reactions and diseases throughout the structure. The smell of mold and mildew can become very overpowering.

According to a representative of the carpet cleaning Long Island firm, "The best way to deal with carpets damaged by water is to call for our professional team to help to restore them to their previous condition. At Carpet Long Island we have experts who know how to tackle the problem of water damage. They have both the training and experience to handle these tasks with expertise and precision. Trust us with your wet carpets and we will restore them to their dry and fresh state and give them a new lease of life."

When carpets or rugs are damaged due to leaking pipes, damaged roofs, overflowing toilets or other water damage, the team of professionals at Carpet Long Island can provide solutions. They perform an inspection to determine the level and location of any damage. They are then able to identify a cost for clean-up and restoration. The professional team is available 24/7 for emergency cases with no extra costs for evening or weekends appointments.

The company has the right equipment, including professional high pressure drying machines which can quickly dry the walls, floor and ceiling around the wet areas. Regardless of the size of the water damage, the right equipment and techniques can be brought in to extract the water from rugs, carpets, upholstery and other furnishing materials. The cleaning team can arrange for the efficient removal of mold, mildew and bacteria which may have begun to breed in the fibers and backing.
