Q. Shi Professional Corporation offers cloud-based accounting services across Canada. The company combines accounting, tax and cloud technology for the benefit of business owners and individuals.

Calgary AB: Q. Shi Professional Corporation (<http://qshicga.com>) and Jessica Shi are pleased to announce the launch of their cloud-based accounting service. The firm operates across Canada, with a fully paperless format. Jessica Shi CPA CGA is knowledgeable and experienced with an industry and education background. Her experience provides her with the knowledge of challenges and issues which small business owners face. She is familiar with daily operation and audit processes of different kinds of small businesses.

According to a company spokesperson, "We are dedicated to protect the interests of small business owners, greatly reduce the risk of an audit and help clients pass an audit successfully. We are noted for our strengths and experience in businesses such as convenience stores, restaurants, construction, auto body shop, childcare, vet clinic, medical clinic and equipment rental. Our direct experience also includes IT services and consulting services, property management and not-for-profit organizations.?

There are several advantages to using a paperless approach in the interaction with clients. Environmental concerns are a significant reason. In addition, going paperless permits the ease and security of digital filing. By digitizing documents secured through advanced encryption, clients can use electronic signature services. They can save storage room and determine the business performance at any time and from any place. Clients save time and energy and get audit protections.

Through a paperless model, the professionals at Shi are able to handle the preparation of financial statements, bookkeeping and tax services. Taxation in Canada is complicated and affects everyone. The company helps clients to legally minimize tax liability. The tax planning and preparation tasks include corporate tax returns, personal tax returns, trust tax returns and tax planning services. Accuracy and timeliness of all services is assured by the professionals. In addition, security and privacy considerations are maintained throughout the course of the work.
