The Centennial-based house painting firm is well-known and respected. The owner-operated painting firm has been offering top-tier custom interior painting for Denver area residents since 1979.

Centennial CO: Centennial House Painters and owner Steve Thompson is pleased to announce that their experience in the industry dates back to 1979. The well-respected firm offers high-quality interior painting for area residents. They understand the stress of implementing a remodel, and the difficulty of locating a skilled and experienced painting contractor. The trained journeyman and team of painters use a comprehensive and professional process to ensure a custom, premium paint job. In addition to top-tier work, the home will be left spotless.

Steve Thompson spoke to an interviewer about the business recently, "We begin by gathering as much information as possible over the phone. We may be able to make some tips which will be appropriate for your particular project. Our experience in painting all types of homes and commercial buildings in the area allows us to understand what you want and prepare a proposal so there is no confusion about a realistic time frame for completion of the project."

According to the website, the company meets the standards for choosing a high-end custom painting contractor. Five questions are identified as demonstrating the professionalism of the contractor. Some of the standards are: arriving on time for the estimate, clean and well-dressed personnel, friendly and courteous attitude, demonstrated knowledge of the topic and in possession of details about processes and products.

The contractors at CHP recognize the importance of preparation for the project. They complete the necessary prep work before beginning the application of paint. A contractual relationship is critical throughout the project. The proper preparation and the highest quality products are necessary.

The application process is best completed by a contractor who has the proper training and skill to paint with smooth strokes, clean lines and laser-straight edges. Preparation and treatment of the surface are required to achieve a quality job.
