Odenton, Md.- The well-established awards and recognition company Allogram Inc. takes interest in the region?s future economy by sponsoring the largest SmartCEO awards program of the year. By becoming a sponsor for the Baltimore Future 50 Awards program, Allogram proves that recognition for entrepreneurial success remains at the forefront of their business philosophy.

?We wanted to show that we care about the spirit of success that pushes businesses into the realm of prosperity,? the owner of Allogram Inc. of Odenton said. ?This ideology resembles our own, so we want to lend our support.?

The winders of the SmartCEO awards program are chosen based on their three-year employee and revenue growth. The winners are also profiled in SmartCEO?s magazine for further promotion. That is why Allogram Inc. found it so pertinent to become a sponsor for the event. Both ideologies revolve around giving credit where credit is due, something that the awards and plaques company could get behind.

?We believe in the Power of Recognition. Recognition is rewarding positive behavior to get that behavior repeated. The benefit in eliciting desired behavior from staff, athletes, students and volunteers is enormous.?

Allogram Inc. has two locations in Maryland and specializes in plaques, acrylics, laser engraving, sandblasting, and trophies in Baltimore. The company also offers a variety of materials for customizing recognition products ranging from several different types of wood, metals, and acrylics. The production of all memorabilia is done in-house so that time and quality can remain in control.

The awards company in the Baltimore area has an extensive equipment list with a graphics design team capable of applying designs to any product. A large variety of raw materials and component parts ensures the highest efficiency at a budget-friendly price.
