February 21, 2017 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Sams Grow Tents offers a range of sizes in their product packages. The tents help to improve the performance of hydroponics production.

Los Angeles CA: Sams Grow Tents and owner Sam Wilson are pleased to announce the launch of their informative website and product line. The website is the project of Sam Wilson who is dedicated to presenting reviews and information about hydroponics gardening. The review of the various tents and their features is meant to assist potential hydroponics gardeners to get started or to expand their growing systems. The systems are suited to a range of products from exotic plants to food supplies for a family.

Grow rooms are available in various sizes, but tend to be much larger than a simple tent. The Big Buddha described in the web content measures 9-feet square. This particular package includes a dual 600w HPS SuperCool lighting system, a Phresh carbon filtering mechanism, internal circulation fans, a digital thermometer, a little giant water pump, a set of analog timers, and trellis system for propping/training fresh shoots.

According to owner Sam Wilson, "When my quest for better hydroponic system began. I researched and found several grow systems. Some met my requirements while others didn't. For some reason I was not satisfied with grow tents. It was then I heard about Gorilla Grow tents. Instantly I fell in love with it. At the same time, I realized that grow tents are the vital element of hydroponics. I set up this website to share the information which I have collected and considered."

The new website recognizes that not all grow room enclosures have all the requisite components for impressive growth, blooming and fruiting. A list of twenty products is provided with the details about advantages of each product. Price discounts are included in the top grow tents defined of the list of twenty. The sizes are in a range of 2-foot by 4-foot, to as large as 9-foot by 9-foot, and several intermediate sizes.
