Natural pet shampoo manufacturer The Pet Spa by Soap.Club is espousing the benefits of using natural ingredients in grooming products for pets. With the return of warmer weather, the importance of regular cleansing of indoor pets becomes more critical. Many commercial pet products contain harsh chemicals, and more frequent bathing with these commercial products dry out the skin and coat. One good option is to invest in natural shampoo for pets in order to avoid the negative effects of the toxic chemicals that many commercial pet products contain.

As Spring and the wet season rapidly approach, aside from regular walks indoor pets are increasingly spending more time outdoors. Quite often they return from their escapades very wet and dirty. Jack Widmer, the Pet Spa Manager, advises that yeast and bacteria live in a pet's fur. He says: "When your furry friends get wet, the water accumulation on their fur allows theses smelly microorganisms to loosen up and rise to the surface of their coat. The result is an offensive smelling pet, and when they come inside they often transmit these odors to home surfaces."

The Pet Spa Natural Hypoallergenic Shampoo & Conditioner is designed to moisturize the coat and hydrate the skin. Pet owners can be confident that they are not causing harm to their best friends by bathing them more often with this pet shampoo. Being hypoallergenic, even dogs with the most sensitive skin are able to enjoy a clean and glossy coat.

Jack Widmer is very confident about the quality of his company's new cat or dog shampoo. He says: "Our moisturizing pet shampoo and conditioner was specially formulated to be suitable for all breeds of dogs and cats (even those with white coats), both small and large, regardless of whether their skin is dry or oily, and to be the best natural alternative to medicated shampoos. It's a perfect tool for professional or at home groomers, and great for top show dogs."

The natural dog shampoo is currently available on Amazon, where it has already attracted a wealth of positive reviews from customers hailing its effectiveness and their pets' apparent enjoyment.
