A quality blade makes a difference in pruning shears. That is what Green Heart Lifestyles, a company based in The Netherlands, wants to emphasize. They point out that the key to longevity of these tools is a quality blade that resists rusting and corrosion. The company produces a set of pruning shears that feature carbon polished blades, which will not rust nor corrode.

"You want a blade that is going to stand the test of time," says Aad Hermann, a spokesperson for the company. "Our pruning shears stay sharp longer, which allows you to keep your garden beautifully pruned."

The company states that their carbon polished blades keep garden tools sharper longer, which offers an obvious benefit to users. Hermann says that instructions are also provided with the shears to help consumers maintain them which helps them to last even longer.

"We know you want your bypass pruning shears to last through many seasons," Hermann states. "This is why we design them for quality and we offer care tips that will help you to extend their life even beyond what the carbon polished blades will do."

Hermann states that the shears are designed specifically for longevity but says that they also offer an ergonomic design which is comfortable to use. The bypass design is ideal for cutting and trimming stems and thin branches or snipping flowers and herbs. The company says that the toughened blades are the highlight of the shears but that the body is also quite durable, made from forged aluminum which gives them a durable yet lightweight property.

Hermann states that because the blades are designed for durability and guaranteed to never rust or corrode, the shears are perfect for use anywhere inside or outside the home or office. The company says that the polished carbon blades are ideal for the avid gardener who may prefer to use tools for several years before replacing it. Carbon strengthens the blades and helps them to avoid moisture buildup which could cause corrosion.
