Steven Feldman, owner of the Huntington Learning Centers, was recently featured on NBC 24 in Toledo, Ohio. Huntington Learning Centers help students, K-College, with tutoring services including ACT, SAT, and various other subjects. The learning center was featured on the Better Living segment of the news show and outlined the services that they provide to students and their approach.

"We personalize our approach with each student," says Steven Feldman. "A diagnostic test is the first step, which helps us to determine the particular strengths and weaknesses of each student. Based on those results, we can create a customized plan to assist each student in reaching his or her particular goals."

The Huntington Learning Center Toledo Ohio has been helping students in the Toledo area since 2006. The center utilizes proven teaching methods and curriculum to assist students in reaching their academic potential.

Feldman states that instead of simply targeting one particular subject in general, they are able to focus on the specific skills of each individual student. He states that while some students may struggle with vocabulary, others may struggle with grammar, or while a math student may understand algebraic symbols and methods, another may better understand math from a geometry angle.

"We customize our programs to help the individual, not the subject. You can like us on Facebook to get more information and see passages and images of our work and our past students," says Feldman.

The company states that they can help any student, including those struggling in general with their subjects or those who want to be the top grade earner in their class. Students are given extra help in the subjects that they need most, and coaching sessions for those preparing for standardized testing like the ACT or SAT are offered. Staff from the Huntington Learning Center includes experienced teachers from the Toledo area. Feldman states that with the methods used and the targeted and personalized approach that the company offers, they are able to help any student with any learning difficulty.

Those interested in learning more can visit the Huntington Learning Center on their official website, on Facebook, or watch the interview on NBC 24 Toledo.
