Sullivan Construction, a company based in Dracut, Massachusetts, has announced huge customer retention in Lowell over the past several months. The company states that due to their quality workmanship and dedication to customer overall satisfaction in their services, such as kitchen and bathroom remodels, their repeat customers and referrals have increased significantly. Customers in the area state that Richard Sullivan, owner and operator of Sullivan Construction has a great talent and passion for every project he undertakes.

"True quality work can only come from specialists, not handymen," says Sullivan. "Our goal is to ensure that our customers are completely satisfied with their kitchen and bathroom remodeling projects, and we always go out of our way to over deliver on client expectations."

Sullivan Construction was founded in 2002 and employs only top craftsmen, all of whom are dedicated to high quality reconstruction work throughout New England. The company offers a wide range of services for area home and business owners including the installation of hardwood and tiling, as well as finished carpentry, plastering and painting, roofing, plumbing and electrical work, and landscaping and cleanup. "We provide our clients with beautiful bathroom and kitchen remodel work," says Sullivan. "We have seen many clients come to us over and over again when they move into a new home or just decide that they want another room remodeled. Our dedication to each individual is what has kept us in business for more than a decade."

Sullivan says that quality work and craftsmanship can only come from a company that loves what they do. He states that each and every staff member thoroughly enjoys turning out high quality projects and says that the company always ensures that each client is completely satisfied with the job that they are provided.

The company states that their business has grown steadily since it was first founded and that multiple customers have returned for additional work or referred Sullivan Construction to their friends and family due to the quality of workmanship that they provide.
