Local Blitz recently announced that they are celebrating eight years as a digital marketing agency in San Diego, California. The company states that they remain focused on providing clients with digital sales funnels when they need it most.

"We are excited to be celebrating this milestone," says Jane Darcy, copywriter with Local Blitz. "Our goal is still to bring value to our clients. We know that we owe our success to them and we stand behind our commitment to quality services."

Darcy states that the company offers solutions to businesses that are not quite large enough to have their own digital marketing department, but who understand how important the concept of digital marketing is. He says that they have been offering services for digital marketing San Diego clients have found to be helpful. These clients range from small to medium sized businesses which include a number of niches from real estate and automotive to ecommerce.

"We believe in long term strategies," says Darcy. "We use systems that work. If we didn't, we wouldn't have been in business this long. We stand behind our commitment to quality service and go above and beyond to meet your digital marketing needs. This was true when we began our company eight years ago and it's true now. It will be true many years into the future as well."

The company has a team of SEO and PPC specialists who use content marketing as well as search engine advertising to help businesses boost their organic search ratings which help them to reach more customers and convert traffic, resulting into more business. They also have a graphic design team that is well-versed in a number of digital marketing products from landing pages to websites. Darcy says that everyone who works with Local Blitz is a specialist of some sort and that the entire team stands dedicated to help businesses improve their website ranking and ultimately, their bottom line.
