Houston TX: Peaceful Preserve and Thomas Snyder are pleased to announce that they have partnered with local California funeral homes in order to provide cremation services, rather than a traditional burial process. Cremation is a relatively recent development, helpful to those who choose the versatility and low cost, as well as many other factors. In the past, religious considerations and direct cremation limitations limited the choice by many individuals. Nearly fifty percent of U.S. citizens now choose local cremation.

Direct cremation is just one of the options which are available to families. Direct cremation is the most affordable, since it doesn't involve embalming of the body and there is no funeral services. Families can be present at the cremation if desired. A memorial service to commemorate the loved one is another option. The ashes can be present or not, as desired. A funeral service followed by cremation is yet another option available to loved ones.

Family members and loved ones can have the option of a traditional viewing, as well as a funeral with a casket present. Saving money as a goal is the choice for direct cremation. Peaceful Preserve assists families with low cost cremations and burial services through California and the entire United States. Information about the topic of cremation is available on the website, or in conversations with helpful assistants.

There are further cremation services available, dependent upon the location. These include memorial services at a funeral home, certified copies of death certificate, mailing of cremated remains within the US and personal delivery of cremated remains. Family members can arrange for a private family viewing, removal of a pacemaker and the presence of a licensed funeral director for burial of cremated remains. Memorial cards or a memorial video are a popular way to remember loved ones. The services can also include submission of obituaries and death notices to newspapers.
